

Animals- Living and Surviving
The Achiever's Sheet

Think and answer: -

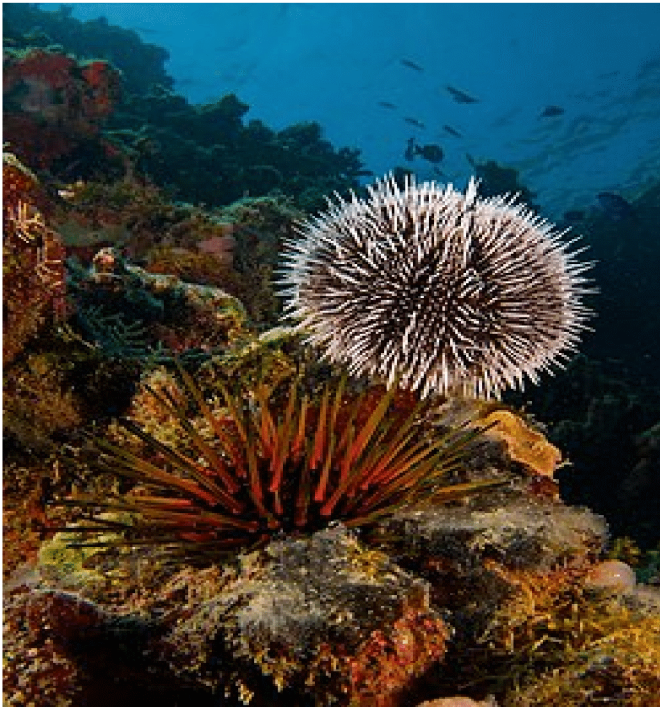

The shape of the body of aerial animals is such that it can easily cut through air. What is this shape called? Where else have we see this shape? Which other animals have this shape? How else is this shape used by the animals?

[HINT: what is common between a fish and an aeroplane? Why do birds fly in v-shape?]

What is the difference between gills and lungs?

Compare and contrast the adaptations of a polar bear and a camel to their respective habitats.

Explain how a herbivorous terrestrial animal obtains its food. Give examples.

These are sea urchins. Find more amazing facts about them.